A SPRINGFEST THANK YOU!

On May 11, the Tuscarora Area Chamber of Commerce held its inaugural Mercersburg Springfest. While it drizzled most of the day, rain did not dampen the spirit of our event. Residents, vendors, and visitors alike enjoyed shopping, eating, fellowship, smiles, and much laughter.

As chamber executive director, I would like to thank: our board of directors for supporting the idea to create an annual springtime festival and participating in the planning/execution of the event; the school district for its partnership, allowing use of the elementary bathrooms, parking, and grounds; and the Mercersburg borough manager, Public Works Department, and police for cooperatively creating a public safety plan to divert traffic and maintain the order of the event.

Finally and most importantly, the chamber thanks those who did the real work in the rain at 6 a.m. and throughout the day until clean up: Gloria Pine, First National Bank of Mercersburg/Buchanan Lioness; Judy Boyd, Whitetail Resort; Chris Ardinger, Tuscarora Education Foundation; Danny Bristol, Bell Insurance; Lisa Ambrisco, First National Bank of Mercersburg; Dr. Liz George, Summit Health; Dana Kaiser, F&M Trust; Melanie Gordon, First National Bank of Mercersburg; Julie Barthalow, Susquehanna Bank; and Tammy Oberholzer, Mercersburg Borough.

These volunteers truly know the meaning of community, and work hard for our region every day!

Respectfully,

Mary-Anne Gordon

PROCRASTINATION LEADERSHIP

Take a look around your office. Look at your desk. Look at your email In-Box. As you look at the various piles of papers and streams of emails, ask yourself, "What am I dodging? What am I trying to delay? What problems, issues, or projects am I finding excuses to avoid? From what am I intentionally (Though I claim it's unintentional) hiding?"

If you're getting nervous by any of the questions above, you're probably avoiding Procrastination Leadership. Procrastination Leadership is a term I've coined to describe that leadership trait that causes effective leaders to address what others fear; to initiate what others avoid; and to complete what others delay. It's that characteristic of overcoming your innate desire to continue to stall, because you've identified those things that are important enough to stay on your To Do list, even though you've been avoiding them. It's that ability to instead tell yourself, "I'm the leader. It's my job to do something about this." Then choosing to forge ahead and do it. It's deciding to bite the bullet and do what needs to be done.

Procrastination Leadership addresses things such as:

- Having Necessary Conversations with under-performing staff*
- Holding meetings with antagonistic colleagues to clear the air and achieve understanding*
- Reviewing difficult documents, texts, and reports to wade through the heavy material so you can move it to the next person waiting for the information*
- Sitting down with team members to layout needed project plans or revamp poorly-performing projects*
- Meeting with board members to clarify roles, responsibilities, and boundaries*
- Working on tasks expected of a leader instead of working on those that should be handled by staff*

Procrastination Leadership is recognizing and then acting upon those various difficult tasks that you, as a leader, are charged with handling; those tasks that you are being paid to address; and those tasks your strong team members have been waiting for you to address.

Don't make them wait any longer. Take on Procrastination Leadership and become the leader others need you to be.
